

EURASIA PROGRAM

The Baltic Bulletin

Foreign Policy Research Institute
Philadelphia, PA

What is The Baltic Bulletin?

A source of analysis on politics, international relations, society, and economics in the Baltic states and the broader Baltic Sea region. Bulletin publishes several short pieces per month, analyzing the news from the Baltic region, connecting scholars' expertise with a broader popular audience.

Why the Baltic region?

No other region is more likely to have such a large influence on the future of Europe. The Baltic states combined have a population smaller than some other countries capitals'. But in debates about Europe's future, they punch above their weight. Whether it is Estonia's technology sector, Latvia's economic policies, or Lithuanian's energy security initiatives, each of the Baltic states plays a disproportionately large role in European politics. We think the Baltic states have stories that need to be heard.

Who writes for The Baltic Bulletin?

Experts from the Baltic states, scholars who study broader European trends, and FPRI's own scholars. We welcome article proposals from new authors. If you're attending AABS, and are interested in explaining your research to a broader, generalist audience, we encourage you to get in touch.

Where is The Baltic Bulletin published?

Online, at www.fpri.org/publications/baltic-bulletin. And via email and social media channels. Sign up for our email list, and follow us on twitter @BalticBulletin

How can I learn more?

Come to our lunch! Friday from 12:00-1:30pm. Or email Chris Miller, the editor of The Baltic Bulletin, at cmiller@fpri.org.