A Decolonizing Moment: Vicarious Identification with Ukraine in the Baltic States and Beyond

Moderators: Ineta Dabašinskiėnė, Andžej Pukšto, Vytautas Magnus University

Thursday, June 15 / 17:45 – 19:00 / S. Daukanto 28, VMU Great Hall

When the war in Ukraine started last year, Maria Mälksoo argued that this war has become a “decolonizing moment of sorts” as Central and Eastern European states have started taking the “moral and practical lead” in supporting Ukraine and thus asserting their own agency. Following this line of argumentation, I assert that this war has indeed become a decolonizing moment for the Baltic states and other actors, both in Central Eastern Europe and beyond. I will explore the Baltic states’ vicarious identification with Ukraine, defining multiple ways in which these actors have initiated policies to support Ukraine internationally and the ways in which solidarity with Ukraine has been received by various domestic constituencies, including ethnic minorities.

By vicariously identifying with Ukraine, the Baltic states have continued their transformation from “policy-takers” to “policy-makers” in the European security landscape that can be traced back to 2004, when they joined the transatlantic community and the European Union. At the same time, similarly to the 2014 crisis in Ukraine, the trauma of the war has become an engine of new discourses and new divisions within the Baltic states, prompting societal debates about the legacy of the Soviet Union associated with Russia (including the fate of monuments to Soviet soldiers) and the relationship with Russian culture. Similar processes are noticeable in other Central and Eastern European states, empowering these actors and turning them into real policy-makers in the region and even changing the nature of transatlantic relations.

PLENARY II

Dr. Arūnas Gelūnas, Director General of the Lithuanian National Museum of Art

Museums at War, Museums Near War. Memory Institutions as Humanitarian and Diplomatic Agents in the Event of Armed Conflicts

Moderators: Jurgita Staniškytė, Ignas Kalpokas, Vytautas Magnus University
Friday, June 16 / 11:00 – 12:15 / S. Daukanto 28, VMU Great Hall

The presentation deals with the experience of the Lithuanian National Museum of Art and its partner institutions in Ukraine since the beginning of the Russian invasion of Ukraine on February 24th, 2022. What new roles can memory institutions adopt in times of armed conflict? Can the museums that usually plan their activities long in advance generate urgent responses to emergencies? Can art become a powerful way to counterbalance brainwashing and propaganda? What is the role of cultural diplomacy? What are the museum communities' and visitors' reactions and participatory modes? The concrete examples of specially designed spontaneous exhibitions, humanitarian aid, rescue operations and communication strategies will be presented and analyzed.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSIONS

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. On the Border: Baltic Transitions from One Front to Another in 1917-1920 History, Memory, Identity (Room 110)

Thursday, June 15 / 16:00 – 17:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chair: Liisi Esse, Stanford University

Participants:

Mart Kuldkepp, University College London

Toivo Kikkas, University of Tartu

Mari-Leen Tammela, Estonian War Museum

Aigi Rahi-Tamm, University of Tartu

Liisi Esse, Stanford University

For the Baltics, WWI did not end in 1917-1918; instead, it continued in continuation wars, including the Estonian War of Independence (EWI), which lasted until 1920. This roundtable focuses on transitions of the Estonian war experience between 1917 and 1920, encompassing a range of transformations, such as the transition of Estonian service members from the multinational Imperial Russian Army to specifically Estonian national units and from there to Estonia's national army, following a period of German occupation until the autumn of 1918, their transition from active service to desertion or imprisonment as POWs, the post-war transition from the front to the home front, and the social and political situation there.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. Many Regions in the Baltic Sea Area Higher Education, Science Policy, and Knowledge Management (Room 110)

Friday, June 16 / 14:00 – 15:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chair: Emilija Pundziūtė-Gallois, Vytautas Magnus University

Participants:

Kazimierz Musiał, University of Gdańsk

Alexander Drost, University of Greifswald

Damian Szacawa, Maria Curie-Skłodowska University in Lublin/ Institute of Central Europe

The Russian invasion of Ukraine brought changes inside the BSR and its environs. What was framed as new regionalism and underpinned by friendly narratives, including Russian partners and Russia, is now questioned; a new way of being-in-the-(Baltic) world is emerging. The roundtable will diagnose the current state of “regionness” and put it in a perspective of multiple region-building narratives that contribute to our understanding of the BSR today. Theories, issues and practical efforts to construct the region in the Baltic Sea area will be discussed, interrogating the tension between narratives that favour the interpretative understanding of concrete, specific events and processes and the alternative nonnarrative explanations that seek explanations based on structure, power relations and systemic dependencies.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. Resistance and Collaboration in 20th Century Latvia:
Toward a New Biography of Vilis Samsons
History, Memory, Identity (Room 311)

Friday, June 16 / 16:00 – 17:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chair: Matthew Kott, Uppsala University

Participants:

Mike Loader, University of Glasgow

Paula Oppermann, University of Munich

Harry Merritt, Brown University

The name ‘Vilis Samsons’ evokes contradictory images among Latvians today. Honored as a Hero of the Soviet Union, this important figure within Latvia’s Soviet partisans in WWII is also known as a troublemaker for defending Latvian interests under Soviet rule in the 1950s. This roundtable explores the usefulness of writing a biography of this controversial figure who shaped Latvian history and historiography. New sources will be presented, including the latest research on 20th Century Latvia, featuring questions such as: What impacts did his upbringing in a middle-class family and socialization in rural Latvia of the 1930s have? Can recent studies on the history of Latvian soldiers in WWII and their commemoration in (post-) Soviet Latvia inform the analysis of his actions? Does his story challenge dominant narratives about the agency and identity of politicians in Soviet Latvia?

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. On the Boundary of Two Worlds – Legacy and New Perspectives
Anthropology, Sociology, and Religion (Room – Leonidas Donskis Library)

Friday, June 16 / 16:00 – 17:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Andres Kasekamp, Toronto University

Dainius Genys, Vytautas Magnus University

In 2004, Leonidas Donskis launched the book series “On the Boundary of Two Worlds. Identity, Freedom, and Moral Imagination in the Baltics” with Rodopi. More than 40 volumes have been published since then. After Donskis’ untimely passing away and the change of the publishing house to Brill, a relaunch of the series is underway and will be presented by the previous and current editors.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. The Impact of the Russia-Ukraine War on Right-Wing Populism in the Baltic States
International Law, Economics, and Political Studies (Room 106)

Saturday, June 17 / 09:00 – 10:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chair: Matthew Kott, Uppsala University

Participants:

Daunis Auers, University of Latvia

Andres Kasekamp, Toronto University

Mindaugas Jurkynas, Vytautas Magnus University

Russia's invasion of Ukraine has profoundly impacted Baltic politics, economics and societies. This roundtable focuses on the reaction of Right-Wing Populist parties and organizations in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania to the war in Ukraine. It seeks answers to several vital questions: What was the programmatic impact on parties competing in parliamentary elections in Latvia and Estonia? What are the similarities and differences between the responses of Right-Wing Populists in the three Baltic states? Have party attitudes to Russia shifted? Has the war emboldened new, pro-Kremlin populists such as the Stability (Stabilitāte) party in Latvia? Are Baltic Right-Wing Populists out of step with their brother and sister parties elsewhere in the EU?

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. Urban Collective Action around Public and Green Spaces
Anthropology, Sociology, and Religion (Room 002)

Saturday, June 17 / 14:00 – 15:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chairs: Paul Draus, University of Michigan-Dearborn; Jūratė Imbrasaitė, Vytautas Magnus University

Participants:

Ed Carroll, Žemieji Šančiai community

Vita Gėlūnienė, Žemieji Šančiai community

Evelina Šimkutė, Kultūros Dirbtuvė

Jūratė Tutlytė, Vytautas Magnus University

This interactive roundtable discussion will explore common themes of urban collective action related to the development, preservation and transformation of urban public and green space in the context of the Baltic region, focusing on Vilnius and Kaunas. This panel will consider the role of social and cultural networks in the city of Vilnius and within three distinct Kaunas neighborhoods – Šančiai, Šilainiai, and Aleksotas – where various assemblages of community, state and academic actors have engaged in projects related to urban public and green space. The roundtable seeks to share experiences and perspectives across different Baltic contexts represented by the case study examples; to explore the dynamics of post-socialist politics, culture and civil society, as well as the influence of Western planning paradigms and neoliberal market models within and across these case studies; to consider the contributions of Baltic cities to global discussions of equitable, sustainable and community-driven redevelopment.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. Machines with a Human Touch: Conversation-Based Solutions for Chatbot User Experience Enhancement Communication, Media, and Journalism (Room 220)

Saturday, June 17 / 14:00 – 15:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chair: Igors Gubenko, University of Latvia

Participants:

Normunds Grūzītis, University of Latvia

Aleksandrs Aleksandrovs, University of Latvia

Marta Valdmane, University of Latvia

Non-human agents have long become our cognitive and communication partners in various everyday contexts. In the project “Humanizing chatbots: conversation-based solutions for chatbot user experience enhancement” (HumBots), an interdisciplinary team of computer scientists, philosophers, and sociologists from the University of Latvia engage in developing recommendations for enhancing the experience of chatbot users. The focus is the HUGO family of customer service chatbots or virtual assistants representing Latvian government institutions. Cognitive, communicative, and emotional aspects of human interactions with various chatbots are studied, including AI-based conversational bots. The issues for discussion are: The meaning and criteria of humanness in communication with non-human agents; Can a chatbot’s feelings be hurt? The ethical dimension of human-chatbot interactions; The HUGO chatbot family as an example of digitalization of state services; Human-chatbot communication: preliminary findings of sentiment and discourse analysis; Provisional recommendations for chatbot-user experience enhancement.

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION. Baltic States, the Baltic Sea Region, and New Security Challenges in Flux International Relations and Regional Security (Room 103)

Saturday, June 17 / 14:00 – 15:30/ V. Putvinskio 23

Chairs: Aleksandra Kuczyńska-Zonik, Tomasz Stępniewski, John Paul II Catholic University of Lublin, Institute of Central Europe

Participants:

George Soroka, Harvard University

Mariusz Antonowicz, Vilnius University

Zdzisław Śliwa, Baltic Defence College

Russia’s attack on Ukraine was highly destructive, destabilizing the regional security environment. The rapid increase in fears about the future of the Baltic states and the awareness of the scale of the threat led to actions aimed at strengthening our security. The unique geopolitical situation and the accompanying aggressive statements from the Kremlin have paradoxically created the conditions for undertaking activities that boost cooperation between them. The authorities in the Baltic states, reacting to the Russian sabotage activities, unanimously took decisive steps to make the economy, the energy sector and the information sphere independent from Russia. The panel aims to show the evolution of the perception of the security of the Baltic states in connection with Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. The optimal way to increase and maintain the region’s stability will be offered, including political, military, economic and information dimensions and strategies for dealing with Russia in a new security reality.

The book is a biography and reception history of the Lithuanian – American archaeologist Marija Gimbutas (1921–1994). It presents a success story of an Eastern European woman who survived both Soviet and Nazi occupations of her homeland, lived as a displaced person in postwar Germany, and built her career and scholarly authority within the androcentric American academia by introducing her theory of Old Europe – a prehistoric civilization characterized by peacefulness, egalitarianism, women’s leadership, and the worship of the Great Goddess.

The author analyzes security developments in Lithuania since 1988, a period marked by liberation from nearly fifty years of Soviet occupation, the collapse of the USSR, and the integration of the country into NATO. In the last few decades and especially since the enlargement of the European Union to formerly socialist countries in Central, Eastern and South-Eastern Europe, most of the new EU member states have experienced high levels of emigration. However, recent studies show increasing numbers of returnees who bring not only financial resources but also valuable human capital, progressive thinking and innovative ideas. This under-researched phenomenon of social remittances by (re)migrants to Croatia, Lithuania, and Poland over the last 30 years is analyzed by the authors of the volume employing diverse research methods.

Participants:

Nijolė Čiučiulkiene, Vytautas Magnus University

Iona Tandzegolskienė, Vytautas Magnus University

Giedrė Kvieskienė, Vytautas Magnus University

In the monograph, the authors' analyses of social and socio-emotional education innovations help systematize distance learning, analyze the socio-emotional competencies of children and young people, and model how to develop them. Low social capital (recorded in the well-being index) and poor mental health, a vital feature of the COVID-19 pandemic, led to increasing youth and adolescent suicides. These factors require a new vision and support for learning methods. In their research and analyses, the authors seek a resolution of making SEEP suitable for every child through family therapy, school practice, and comprehensive support in everyday social-emotional well-being for children, especially those from disadvantaged backgrounds and NEETs.

Participants:

Giedrius Česnakas, Ieva Gajauskaitė, Gerda Jakštaitė-Confortola, Justinas Juozaitis, Ieva Karpavičiūtė, General Jonas Žemaitis Military Academy of Lithuania

This book analyzes whether the EU's drift towards European strategic autonomy presents a challenge or a window of opportunity for its small member states to advance their security interests. The volume presents perceptions of small states regarding European strategic autonomy highlighting their expectations and concerns, national security considerations, assessment of the impact on transatlantic relations, and its potential impact on the EU's institutional structure. It also shows how systemic circumstances and the interests of powerful states, either belonging to the EU (France, Germany, and Poland) or having a significant say in European security architecture (the US), establish opportunities and constraints for the small states to shape European strategic autonomy.

Kalpokas, I. and J. Kalpokienė. 2023. Regulating the Metaverse: A Critical Assessment. New York: Routledge.

Discussant: Donata Bocullo, Vytautas Magnus University

Presenters: Ignas Kalpokas, Julija Kalpokienė, Vytautas Magnus University

The metaverse seems to be on everybody's lips, yet very few people can explain what it means or why it is important. This book aims to fill this gap from an interdisciplinary perspective informed by law, media, and communications studies. The authors critically evaluate the antecedents and the building blocks of the metaverse, the design and regulatory challenges that need to be solved, and commercial opportunities that are yet to be fully realized. While the metaverse is poised to open new possibilities and perspectives, it is also dangerous, with threats ranging from disinformation to intellectual property theft to sexual harassment. The book offers a useful guide to the legal and political governance issues ahead, contextualizing them within the broader domain of governance and regulation of digital technologies.

Sharing Our Stories: The Baltic Diaspora at Home in Canada

Through photos, documents and life stories, Sharing our Stories: The Baltic Diaspora at Home in Canada profiles the age-old story of people forced to leave their homeland due to the Second World War and political oppression and start a new life elsewhere. This exhibit is based on a series of interviews with seniors from Ontario's Estonian, Latvian, Lithuanian and Baltic German communities. Their personal 'snapshot stories' shed light on what it means to be Baltic, and on the universal experiences of migration and settlement.

Mariupolis 2 (2022) by Mantas Kvedaravičius is a document of the war in Ukraine that is as raw and real as it comes. The initial documentary, Mariupolis, was made in 2016. Mariupolis 2 focuses on everyday life in a city that is being destroyed as we watch.

‘You know what was absolutely incredible in Mariupol? Nobody was afraid of death, even though they thought they were. Death was already here, and everybody wanted to die meaningfully. People even risked their own lives to help each other. They smoked outside and talked, even while bombs were falling. Money no longer existed because life had become too short to think about it. Everyone was happy with what they had, becoming a better version of themselves; there was no past, no future, no judgement, no ambiguity! It was paradise in hell. The touching, fragile wings of a butterfly. The smell of the true value of death. That’s what life was like there’, reads the presentation of the film.

M. Kvedaravičius (1976-2022) was a Lithuanian filmmaker with a degree in social anthropology from Cambridge University. His films Mariupolis (2016) and Parthenon (2019) were selected at the Berlinale and the Venice International Critics’ Week, respectively. Mantas Kvedaravičius was captured and killed by Russian Forces at the end of March 2022 in Mariupol while documenting Russia’s invasion of Ukrainian territory.

The main producers of Mariupolis 2 are the Lithuanian film production companies Extimacy Films and Studio Uljana Kim. Nadia Turincev (Easy Riders Films, France) and Thanassis Karathanos (Twenty Twenty Vision, Germany), the producers of Kvedaravičius’ earlier film Mariupolis, were also involved in the production.

The documentary Mariupolis 2 by M. Kvedaravičius won a European Film Award as the best documentary of 2022 and received the jury’s Special Award at the Cannes Film Festival.

PRINCIPAL MEMBERS:

AUGUSTA JUSIONYTĖ (violin, concertmaster)
DALIA KONTUTĖ (violin)
JULIJA IVANOVAITĖ (violin)
AGATA URSUL (violin)
LIUDVIKAS SILICKAS (cello)
AUGUSTINAS SOKALSKI (cello)
GEDIMINAS GELGOTAS (founder | artistic director | composer)

It was back in 2006 when Lithuanian composer Gediminas Gelgotas came up with an idea to find an ensemble to perform his music and translate his artistic visions into reality. Today, this embodiment of ‘one-artist-vision’, called the New Ideas Chamber Orchestra NICO, brings the composer’s music to the leading classical and contemporary music venues, and reaches new and young audiences of classical music with their highly attractive, captivating, and original music performances.

The uniqueness of the NICO concept is highly determined by Gelgotas’ musical language, in which the classical music idiom is mixed with the light hints and influences of popular music. The composer’s vision of integrating minimalistic choreographic details into performances while the musicians play music by heart, using non-traditional string instrument techniques and voice, all of it combined is what creates the exciting concert experiences that are reinventing the borders between experimental, minimal, contemporary art and more popular, mainstream music forms. Their shows also often incorporate stunning transcriptions of the most beloved classical works by Bach, Vivaldi, and Mozart, as well as new music of other minimalists such as Riley, Glass, Tavener, Pärt, Richter and others. When listening to NICO, you may want to turn inward and meditate or just get up and dance - the effect is mesmerizing, and the result is inspiring to all ages.

Having received the attention of critics and professionals, the New Ideas Chamber Orchestra received the title of Vilnius City Ensemble in 2022. NICO is making appearances at prestigious concert venues and festivals, including Leipzig Gewandhaus, St. Martin-in-the-Fields and Roundhouse in London, Odesa, and St Petersburg Philharmonic Halls, Usedomer (Germany), Toulon (France), Odesa Classics (Ukraine), Ventura (USA) music festivals. NICO is also capturing the attention of the international press – Classic FM radio station with 5.5 million listeners have presented NICO live from their studios, whilst BBC World Service named NICO “truly worth attention” during a 10-minute special on Gelgotas and his ensemble. Besides appearing across Europe, Asia and the United States, NICO has performed for His Holiness Dalai Lama, Pope Francis, and Queen Sonja of Norway. Their recording session took place at the prestigious Real-World Studios in the United Kingdom, Paramount (Los Angeles), Metropolis (London), and Peermusic Classical (Hamburg) studios and was released by Peermusic Classical. NICO collaborates with such performers as Kristjan Järvi, David Geringas, Roman Patkoló, Mari Samuelson, Avi Avital, Ksenija Sidorova, Kiril Troussov, Ole Edvard Antonsen, Alexey Botvinov, Janusz Wawrowski among others.
